

Salem business briefs

Salem News October 30, 2007

---

Keisha Kenny-Doyle of Salem was recently awarded the Mental Health and Substance Abuse Corporation of Massachusetts Excellence in Outcomes Award. MHSACM is a statewide association of 100 providers of mental health and substance abuse services in Massachusetts. The award recipient had to demonstrate a personal commitment to quality and innovation in the performance of their work, to carrying out that commitment in a manner deserving of special recognition, and to integrating, utilizing and managing client outcomes for quality improvement. The award was presented to Kenny-Doyle at MHSACM's annual provider celebration on Oct. 16. Gov. Deval Patrick was the guest speaker.

Kenny-Doyle is employed by Bridgewell in Lynnfield, where she is assistant director of North Shore residential services, with responsibility for operations across 10 sites that support 150 individuals. Nominations for the award were received from providers throughout Massachusetts.

Bridgewell is a private, nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting and helping individuals with disabilities, and provides services to over 2,900 such individuals each day throughout the North Shore (including in Salem) and Merrimack Valley. To learn more about Bridgewell, visit <http://www.bridgewell.org>.